Editor,
Torrance Press:
The generous publicity given by the Torrance Press to the recent "Flag City" campaign was an important contribution to the U. S. Defense Bond program.
Through your help in creating public interest in the project, Torrance became the first city in California to have 80% or more of its employers pledged to make the Payroll Savings Plan available to their employees.
As a result, a substantial increase in the number of regular, systematic purchasers of Defense Bonds no doubt will result.
Thanks for your fine cooperation with this vital Treasury program.
Most sincerely,
J. B. Messick
State Director

Replacement Of 'Landmark' By New Unit

What might be considered a "landmark" of Torrance, the Texaco service station on the corner of Arlington avenue and Carson street is being torn down to make way for a completely new and modern unit, according to Wayne A. "Red" Morse, proprietor.

Originally built in 1924, the station is one of the oldest in Torrance. Chief of Police John Stroh, who helped in the building of the station, said that it is the last of the "pioneer" service stations here to be re-built.

Morse said that about $30,000 to $35,000 is being expended on the station in remodeling it. It will be a two-way unit with a total of five pumps, three at one island and two at the other. Morse added that the station is being remodeled to accommodate motor tune-ups and brake repair. The work is expected to be completed within the next six to eight weeks.

Morse, who resides at 923 Fay-smith street, Torrance, has been proprietor of the service station for the last two years.
